The following seven ingredients are as listed on the MSDS sheet of Stanadyne Performance Formula (not "Jr."). mowermech wrote:The MSDS (states the stuff contains: Hydrotreated light distillate (petroleum) (think 3-in-1 oil) 60 - 100% Naphthalene .1 - 1% 1,2,4-Trimethylbenzene .1 - 1% So, basically, you are putting 4 ounces of highly refined light machine oil in your fuel tank, with a very small amount of Naphtha (available at any paint store) and a very small amount of Benzene. I suggest that you look up the MSDS of some of the other more commonly used additives. I would almost be willing to bet they are all pretty much the same stuff! How much lubricity does 4 ounces of light machine oil add to 30 gallons of diesel fuel? How much cetane boost does less than 1% of 4 ounces of Naphtha and Benzene give to 30 gallons of diesel fuel? It seems that would be a barely measurable concentration. I never used additives of any kind when I had a diesel truck. Oh, wait, I take that back, I DID get some "anti-gel" once when cold weather caught me with summer fuel in the tank. It seemed to help. Or, perhaps, it was the warmer temperatures that day. I can't prove anything either way! The store will not work correctly in the case when cookies are disabled. Activate and hold the button to confirm that you're human. Thank You!
